Vegetable garden gets off the ground on estate

Green fingers: Maria Braunhofer, Rishi Patel, seven, and Donovan Kelly

A GROUP of residents in Wood Green will soon be eating home-grown tomatoes and aubergines after transforming their estate's courtyard into a vegetable garden.

A wide variety of vegetables is growing in what were previously six overgrown banks of earth in communal space in Morant Place, off Commerce Road, and the gardeners are making it clear that the produce is free for all of their neighbours to pick and enjoy.

"It's open to everyone," said Maria Braunhofer, 59, who was the first resident to investigate whether the space outside her home could be put to more productive use.

A gardener by profession, she made enquiries in May with the estate caretaker and after receiving the all-clear, she got to work, making use of manure donated by her employer and help offered by other residents.

"Neighbours started to bring out things like seeding potatoes and beans and we went for it," she said.

"It's very rewarding, it brings people together.

People start talking to one another when we're out here. It's good for the community."

For 56-year-old Donovan Kelly, taking care of the garden has become a daily activity. "Every morning I'm out here at 6am," he said. "I would be happy to spend every second of the day tending the patches."

Harry Hughes, 79, also helps out when he can. "I come out here from time to time to keep an eye on things," he said, "and if I grow anything small on my balcony, I'll bring it to plant here."

With residents preparing for colder months ahead, Maria said: "We've planted some beans and spinach. After the tomatoes come out, we can plant cabbage, onions and garlic, too."

Shannon Moloney, housing services officer at Metropolitan housing association, which owns the homes on the estate, added: "It's great to see residents getting together to enrich their estate. The vegetable patches provide a recreational and social outlet for the community, not to mention a source of delicious fresh vegetables for all residents to share."

Stolen: Ceremonial clothing and helmets were among the items taken during a raid on a military supply store on Monday

Military uniforms stolen from store

POLICE are appealing for help in tracing ceremonial uniforms worth more than £60,000 which were stolen from a military supply store in South Tottenham on Monday evening.

Nine items of ceremonial clothing and two silver Household Cavalry helmets were stolen during the burglary at about 5.50pm.

Officers have released pictures of the uniforms and want to hear from anyone who is offered these items for sale or who has any information concerning the theft.

Anyone with any information is asked to contact Haringey Police Burglary Unit on 101, or call Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

DISABLED ACCESS A RAIL PROBLEM

MP pushes for improvements at stations

AN MP is campaigning for better disabled access at stations in the borough.

Lynne Featherstone, Liberal Democrat MP for Hornsey and Wood Green, has been campaigning for better access for commuters to and from platforms on routes along the First Capital Connect line that runs from Moorgate and King's Cross through Finsbury Park, Hornsey, Haringey, Alexandra Palace and Bowes Park.

The MP launched her campaign in August in a bid to make Network Rail improve stations to allow disabled commuters, those with pushchairs or heavy bags to use the stations.

And in a bid to further her campaign, on August 27 she lobbied commuters passing through Alexandra Palace station to sign the petition in favour of improving access.

Slamming the lack of access at stations, she said: "It is just not acceptable in this day and age to have such useful local services which are not accessible to everyone."

"At Alexandra Palace, work has been done to make the bridge accessible and step free. But then there is no step-free way to get down on the platform. It is clear that an elevator is needed, as soon as possible. This is the kind of improvement the study could look into."

She plans to take the petition to a meeting with Network Rail later this month and will push for a proper accessibility study into the stations that serve the borough.

"I hope residents will get behind this campaign. Even if they are not directly affected by the access problems - I am sure they all know someone who is. The more signatures we get, the stronger our case to Network Rail will be," she added.

When she launched her campaign earlier in August, she said: "Getting on to a platform at Hornsey requires walking up and down two long staircases. At the others there are slopes into the stations, but no lifts down on to the platforms. This makes it dangerous - and in some cases impossible - for disabled or elderly passengers, or those carrying big bags or young children to access the rail services.

"I have made enquiries with Network Rail and our new rail service provider, Govia. Shockingly, there are no current feasibility studies on providing step-free access at our local stations. This is just not right."

"That's why I am asking residents to join me in campaigning for this study, to help improve our local rail stations and make them accessible for everyone."

Stop and search still 'causing resentment'

Youth worker critical of new police code of conduct

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

AN EDMONTON youth worker has criticised the introduction of a new code of conduct for police officers using the controversial stop and search tactic.

Ken Hinds, also a leading member of the Haringey Independent Stop and Search Monitoring Group, branded the Best Use of Stop and Search scheme, launched by Home Secretary Theresa May last week, as "too little, too late" and called for a total revamp of the tactic.

Police have powers to stop and search individuals, including for suspicion of a drugs offence, carrying a weapon and impending violence.

The Met, which has pledged to make stop and search "more intelligence-led", said that it was implementing two components of the scheme, to which police forces can sign up to voluntarily.

It is introducing higher levels of authorisation before considering the use of Section 60 – the blanket power to stop and search people in anticipation of serious violence without any prior suspicion – and it is improving the recording of the outcomes of searches in order to become more transparent.

However, Mr Hinds, who said he had been wrongly stopped and searched more than 125 times in his life, said that despite recent reforms the tactic continued to create resentment within many communities. He said: "They are tinkering with a policy that should have been revamped a long time ago and they do not understand the resentment this is causing towards the police."

Recent figures show that the use of stop and search in Enfield is decreasing from about 2,000 in May last year to 1,100 in May this year. Ethnic minorities are searched 1.5 times more often than whites.

Commander Adrian Hanstock, the Met Police's lead for stop and search, said: "The Met has made significant improvements to stop and search and we are arresting more people than ever before and routinely find people in possession of weapons and stolen items."

Reforms are tinkering, says Ken Hinds

Significant rise in total of council tenants buying their homes

ENFIELD has seen a significant jump in the number of tenants buying their homes from the council under the revived Right-to-Buy scheme.

Since the coalition government reinvented Margaret Thatcher's flagship policy by raising the discount with which council tenants can buy their properties to £100,000 in April last year, 133 Enfield Council homes have been sold to tenants. In Haringey, 177 council properties were sold while in Barnet it was 138 during the same period.

Only eight Enfield tenants bought their home during 2011/12. The following year that figure jumped to 56.

In an ironic twist that reveals the extent of the borough's housing crisis, this week it was revealed the council has snapped up two properties it previously sold at a considerable discount under Right-to-Buy to house families in need.

Faced with 2,398 households in temporary accommodation in the private sector and a council housing waiting list numbering 2,609 households, earlier this year the council set up a company to buy homes in the private sector to house families at risk of homelessness.

Ahmet Oykener, Enfield Council's cabinet member for housing, said the government must give local authorities the right to opt out of the policy.

"We are trying to build more, but as this goes on it is putting pressure on our resources because we are housing people in need in the private sector."

Joanne Laban, the deputy leader of Enfield Council's Conservative group, defended the policy.

"We support Right-to-Buy and it should continue," she said. "Successive governments have not built enough new homes and that should be addressed, but helping people to buy their own home is good policy."

Family says sad farewell to our 'giant of history'

Many mourners pay tribute to expert

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

MORE than 100 people turned out for a thanksgiving service to commemorate the life and work of Enfield historian David Pam last week.

Family members shared their memories of Mr Pam, who died aged 94 on August 17, during the service at St Michael and All Angels Church in Gordon Hill, Enfield, following his funeral at Enfield Crematorium on Thursday.

Mr Pam, a self-taught historian, was well-known for chronicling the history of the borough, the walks he organised and his prominent involvement in both the Enfield Society and the Edmonton Hundred Historical Society.

In her eulogy, the historian's elder daughter, Christine Combe, 63, described her father as "a lovely dad, gentle and kind, rarely disciplining".

She read two poems her father was fond of, adding: "He loved reading history, poetry and literature, but mainly poetry, because literature took too much time that could be spent reading history."

Grandson David spoke of times spent with "Pops" during holidays in Brighton and at Tottenham Hotspur games, while his father Andrew recalled the fact that Mr Pam would never criticise his wife Maisie, 92, with whom he had celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary in May.

"Maisie gave him a real sense of confidence and belief that he could achieve something in his life," said Mr Combe. "There's no doubt in my mind that he loved her with all his heart. I suspect he did from their first date up until the day he died."

Born in Edmonton in 1920, Mr Pam lived in the borough all his life and devoted himself to chronicling the history of Enfield.

He did not go to university and taught himself French and medieval Latin so he could study from original sources – and was often found carrying out research at the National Archives in Kew, west London.

In the 1950s, he worked as a reference librarian in Edmonton Library before becoming Enfield Council's local history and museum officer. He set up the Enfield Museum Service in 1975.

After retiring in 1982, Mr Pam wrote five books. The Story of Enfield Chase was followed by A History of Enfield in three volumes – A Parish Near London, A Victorian Suburb and A Desirable Neighbourhood – all of which were published by the Enfield Society.

He also wrote a book about the history of the Royal Small Arms Factory, in Enfield Lock.

Christopher Jephcott, president of the Enfield Society, said: "This modest, unassuming man was an intellectual giant who chose to devote his talents to describing the history of Enfield and Edmonton. He certainly leaves us with a greatly enhanced awareness of the sometimes beautiful and always interesting place we live in."

Marchers for the NHS will hold rally

Speaking out: NHS campaigner Kate Wilkinson will address the rally on Friday

HEALTH campaigners who are travelling 300 miles on foot to campaign for the National Health Service will reach the borough on Friday.

The People's March for the NHS, led by a group of mothers from Darlington in County Durham, started on August 16 in nearby Jarrow and has passed through 23 towns and cities along the way.

The marchers are aiming to reach North Middlesex University Hospital, in Sterling Way, Edmonton, at 5pm, after which they will hold a rally at the Fore Street office of Edmonton MP Andy Love.

The campaigners are alarmed about the impact of the 2012 Health and Social Care Act, which includes a controversial clause that requires health commissioners to put virtually all services out through competitive markets, which critics say is rapidly increasing the involvement of private companies in the NHS.

A spokeswoman for the marchers said: "The message from the mums is a simple one – the NHS is owned by and loved by us and every effort will be made to stop it being sold off." Following in the footsteps of the Jarrow Marchers, who travelled to Westminster by foot in protest against unemployment and poverty in 1936, the group of mothers has organised its own march in support of the NHS.

Save Chase Farm campaigner Kate Wilkinson, who will address the rally, told the Advertiser: "The NHS is not for sale and should not be put out to tender. It should remain free at the point of delivery for everybody, regardless of ability to pay."

Mr Love said: "I welcome the action of everybody involved in the march to highlight just what is happening to our health service and I share a lot of their concerns. The NHS should be free at the point of need and we will do everything in our power to ensure that."

At 2.30pm on Saturday the campaigners will march from the offices of union Unite, in Holborn, central London, to Parliament Square, in Westminster, where another rally will be held.

Fury as campaigners lose school places bid

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A CAMPAIGN group is furious that an abandoned school site will not be used to provide primary school places for an education "blackspot".

The South West Enfield Action Team (SWEAT) has been lobbying Enfield Council for more than a year in a bid to boost the number of primary school places in and around Southgate, Winchmore Hill and the Fox Lane area.

After a pledge earlier in the year that the council would set up two new forms of primary school entry in the area, the campaigners believed that one of the sites being considered was the old Minchenden School, in High Street, Southgate, which has been leased by the council for two years.

But when they learned that, in fact, the council would be using the facility to cater for children with special educational needs they realised that the site was off the table.

"The council have reneged on their promise," Gonul Daniels, chairwoman of the campaign group, said. "I think it is very two-faced of the council. They said they were going to work with us, but it really feels as though they have turned their backs on parents. All we want are local schools for local children – and a choice for parents."

The campaign originated when parents

in and around the Fox Lane area of Palmers Green and Southgate were left to choose between driving their children across the borough, home schooling them or sending them to a school that was not one of their preferences.

But a council spokesman stressed the group was never told the Minchenden site could be used for primary education.

He added: "We are committed to providing enough high-quality school places for our increasing numbers of children and young people including those with special needs, but because we are still in the process of acquiring the lease for Minchenden, the site was not available for the start of this school term and the council told SWEAT that Minchenden would not be used for primary places.

"Temporary primary school places are being provided for the September 14 intake while the council continues to develop plans for a permanent two-form entry primary school in this area.

"So far we have provided more than 4,400 additional primary school places in high-quality buildings across the borough over the past four years – with a further 2,000 places due to follow as a result of the current expansion programme."

Sun set to go down on solar panels

'Important opportunity': David Flint, from the Green Party

COUNCIL chiefs have been advised to refuse planning permission to a field of solar panels that would give energy to 4,000 homes, in order to protect newts, bats and badgers.

The planning application to construct a 15.2MW capacity solar farm on a 25-hectare site in the green belt on the outskirts of the borough will come before Enfield Council's planning committee on Thursday.

In a report submitted to the council before the meeting at the Civic Centre, in Silver Street, Enfield, officers have recommended that councillors refuse the application as not enough has been done to assess the impact the construction will have on barn owls, great crested newts, badgers, brown hares and bats.

Although the officers do say in the report that the site "is not a conservation area nor are any of the properties within the wider site demise listed buildings", the council's tree officer states that it is "unacceptable to remove several mature oak trees of established landscape and biodiversity value" to make way for the field of solar panels.

The site, behind Slomans Farm, off Whitewebbs Road and bordered by the M25, is shielded partly by hedgerow and trees.

But the officers' report states that the applicant "has failed to demonstrate the 'very special circumstances' that would justify the scheme".

However, Green Party prospective parliamentary candidate for Enfield North David Flint says the benefit of solar power outweighs any objections.

"This is an important opportunity for Enfield to contribute to the fight against climate change," he said. "This array will cut CO2 emissions by over 6,000 tons per year.

"Sunlight is free and clean. Fossil fuels pollute the air and wreck the climate. It's a no-brainer. This will be clean power for over 4,000 homes.

"This is what the Green New Deal wants nationally – green jobs and clean energy."

Environmental campaigners have to leave camp Bailiffs evict squatters protesting against new housing development

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

SQUATTERS who were occupying the site of a former university campus were evicted by bailiffs last Thursday.

The environmental campaigners had been served an eviction notice after a judge granted a possession order to developers London and Quadrant Housing – giving them permission to kick the protesters off the site in Cat Hill, Cockfosters, on the borough boundary with Barnet.

According to the protesters, bailiffs arrived early in the morning and removed their tents and belongings from the former Middlesex University site, where a housing development is under construction.

Environmental campaigner Esther, from Hungary, said that, despite being thrown out of the camp, she was determined to stay and try to stop any further environmental damage to the site. She has set up camp on the grassy verge outside alongside the main road.

“There are five types of bats here,” she told the Advertiser. “I will stay here for maybe two more weeks – documenting the destruction of the trees and the wildlife with my camera. I care deeply about forests and I worry about what man is doing to them.”

Kim Coleman, leader of a residents’ protest against the development of 231 homes, who arrived at the site after the eviction, praised the conduct of the police officers on the scene. She said they had behaved “brilliantly”, but added: “The bailiffs rifled through their belongings and left them lying everywhere.”

“I know the site was clean when the protesters left it and I worry about the state it’s been left in.”

“We will not give up. We will keep resisting this development because what they’re doing is just not right.”

Foodbanks to the rescue as debt piles up for claimants losing out on benefits

By Koos Couvee

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

WHEN Maria Georgiou, 47, was declared "fit for work" following a capability assessment three years ago, she was devastated.

Having suffered from a number of conditions ever since she fell down a flight of stairs in 1993, she had been unable to hold down a job and dreaded losing the £96 in incapacity benefit she received each week.

Without her GP being contacted by Atos, the firm which assessed her on behalf of the Department for Work and Pensions, the mother-of-two, of Gilbert Street, Enfield, who suffers from sciatica – a set of symptoms caused by the irritation of one of the spinal nerve roots, which at times paralyses her legs – damaged hips and arthritis, was deemed fit for work and told she did not qualify for the newly-introduced employment support allowance.

"This person who did the assessment works for the government, who in my view are trying to get people off benefits," she told the Advertiser.

"They never got in touch with my GP. There is no way someone would employ me. I can't stand up for any long period of time and I'm often completely unable to get out of bed."

Since the assessment Ms Georgiou has lost about £30 a week in benefits and has incurred a significant amount of debt – and last month she was forced to make use of the Enfield North foodbank in Great Cambridge Road, Enfield, when her benefits were stopped due to an administrative error.

Despite the much-heralded economic recovery, thousands of Enfield residents are turning to foodbanks as a result of benefit cuts, sanctions and the rising cost of living, according to Jill Harrison, chief executive of the Enfield Citizens Advice Bureau.

"I have seen cases of people with dementia who can barely remember their own name being declared fit for work," she said. "It would not be so bad if people could receive benefits while they apply for reconsideration."

"We are giving out vast numbers of foodbank vouchers and many people are having to turn to payday lenders to make ends meet."

Last month Hugh Donovan, 58, of Enfield Highway, went to the foodbank after the DWP cut off his

Enfield CAB chief executive: Jill Harrison employment support allowance.

am taking twice the amount of antidepressants than before, it's really bad."

Despite being on the waiting list for a knee replacement and suffering from depression, lower back problems, shoulder problems, Crohn's disease and nerve damage to both wrists, he was declared fit for work following an assessment in May.

Enfield North MP Nick de Bois said: "Poorly managed administration leads to unacceptable delays as well as a high number of appeals that are subsequently overturned."

BACK in my office after the bank holiday and what a weekend it was. In the Met, we talk about "Police Constable Rain" and if it rains we get low crime.

It was relatively busy. On Saturday, officers dealt with two men who had taken Crystal Meth and were fighting in the street. Both had to be rushed to hospital, where they remained for a couple of days under police guard.

This is a huge draw on our resources, but necessary and shows how the demands on police increase in a changing world. There's very little known about the long-term affects and my advice is, in the words of the 1980s' campaign, "Just Say No!"

We ran an armed operation on Monday resulting in seven arrests. The intention was to intercept and disrupt violent gang members on their way to Notting Hill Carnival.

I've noticed the nights are drawing in and doors and windows are closed and the lights are on inside.

October to December are the peak months for burglary in Enfield. We're getting prepared for this with a plan that involves our neighbourhood policing officers working with partners.

Please start looking at security and what you can do to improve it. Make your house look lived in, with a timer light on a lamp in downstairs and upstairs and a radio or TV on in the background, close your curtains, always lift the handle on your UPVC doors and double lock and fit an extra padlock on your shed.

Don't forget to follow us on @MPSEnfield for updates on what's happening in your borough.

We are suffering more than most as the cuts to health services take hold

I WAS sorry to read (Advertiser, August 27) that MP David Burrowes had such a terrible ordeal at North Middlesex A&E and I am pleased he is now on the mend.

Unfortunately, his is the second case I have heard of recently of a patient suffering a ruptured appendix after being made to wait too long in A&E.

Although I welcome the recent CQC report that found many good areas of care and the staff were commended for their compassionate care, the report also found that A&E staffing levels were too low and managers were "fire-fighting issues".

This comes as no surprise to members of Enfield Council Health Panel and local health campaigners, who consistently argued that the removal of A&E at Chase Farm was a mistake and North Mid would not be able to cope with the extra demand.

We were given endless assurances that measures were in place and patients would receive better quality care.

The council believed that promised primary healthcare services were not developed sufficiently enough to prevent patients going to A&E and, inevitably, North Mid would be unable to meet the need of a growing number of patients needing urgent care.

Cuts to the NHS are a national issue, but Enfield seems to be suffering more than most areas.

Our residents are waiting longer and longer for GP and hospital appointments as the cuts to services take hold. Despite Tory promises to protect spending on the NHS, they have cut it by £20billion – with more to come.

Mr Burrowes was present at the meeting where the CCG, under the direction of the Secretary of State for Health, announced the decision to close A&E and maternity at Chase Farm.

He fully supported this decision and stood up and publicly said so. I bet he now wishes he had spoken up against the closure sooner.

Overview & Scrutiny Panel

Solar panel proposals should be encouraged

THE solar panels proposed at Sloemans Farm are creating quite a storm in some circles. People will often give assent to the need for renewable energy, but when it is to be sited near them they find all sorts of reasons to object.

The industrialisation of the countryside is often given as one reason for objecting – but look at the huge fields of mono-culture crops often sprayed and fertilised with fossil fuel products. It seems pretty industrialised to me and I think always has been.

The producing of local food is certainly something we should be aiming at and pigs and sheep could graze below the panels. Nearby Crews Hill with its many retail outlets was once the place where many tomatoes and cucumbers etc were grown.

I tend to think, what's the alternative – vast nuclear power stations in remote places, such as the Lake District, or perhaps Romney Marsh? Let their land and air be contaminated – but not near me.

When confronted by a proposal for renewable energy with little pollution, producing electricity near to where it is to be used, without all the power losses resulting from long-distance generation, I would choose the PV panels.

When I see PV panels, wind turbines and other renewable technologies, I feel grateful that technology has allowed clever people to develop relatively benign systems to generate our electricity.

I wish Enfield would do more. We need to encourage developments. We need to take responsibility for producing our own electricity as we all use it.

Suspensions aroused by tree vandals

YOUR report "Vandalised trees may never return" (Advertiser, August 27) was most bizarre.

First, a mysterious "guerrilla gardener" plants an unauthorised group of 13 trees (in a park where trees are commonly found).

Having been allowed to grow to maturity, these trees are then equally mysteriously cut down in a targeted "act of vandalism" that appears to have been suspiciously well-planned and executed.

To cap it all, in rejecting the notion that they may be replaced, Chris Bond states: "If everyone went around planting trees, there would be mayhem", a remark of supreme irony, coming as it does from the cabinet member for the environment.

You really couldn't make it up.

Marchers on the last leg of crusade for the NHS

THERE is remarkable courage taking place by a group called the Darlingtonmums inspired by the historic Jarrow Crusade march to London in 1936.

Approximately 50 have started a 300-mile march in all weather conditions from Jarrow to London, from August 16 to September 6.

They have been going through 23 towns and cities, coordinating with different groups and other like-minded people as they go, for part or all of the march.

The privatisation and loss of much of our NHS has sparked this 999 Peoples March – and it's coming to Enfield.

They want political parties to debate and state their true intentions for the NHS before the next election.

Unfortunately, they will not be passing Chase Farm Hospital – but they will be passing Barnet Hospital and North Middlesex Hospital on Friday (September 5).

The St Albans to Edmonton leg of the march will have a lunch stop in Ravenscroft Gardens, in Wood Street, Barnet, at about 1pm.

After passing Barnet Hospital, they will head towards Arnos Grove Tube station and the North Circular Road and through the subways towards Silver Street, Edmonton, passing North Middlesex Hospital at about 5pm, to their destination at Broad House, Fore Street, Edmonton, for a rally at about 5.30pm.

You need to inform a steward if you are joining or leaving the march.

They depart from Edmonton Green at 10am on Saturday and have lunch in Clissold Park, Stoke Newington, at 11.45am before marching to Parliament at 2pm, with an assembly at Unite head office in Theobalds Road for the final stage of the march.

Arrive at Parliament Square at 3.30pm for the final rally. Residents' support would be most welcome.

Scan barcode on his statue to learn more about his life

By Ivana Scatola

news.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

IF you have ever wondered what an Enfield founding father would have said of his life, you can find out with a swipe of a smartphone.

Hugh Myddelton, who lived from 1560 to 1631, brought clean water to 17th-century north London with the New River loop.

He can now be heard telling passers-by about his life when they scan a barcode on his statue's plinth that is situated in Islington Green with their phones.

The statue of the goldsmith, who has been commemorated with street names in the borough and gave his name to E. A. Bowles' sprawling estate in Bulls Cross, Enfield, stands on the south edge of Islington Green, near where the New River, which runs from Ware in Hertfordshire into central London, terminates.

On August 19 community arts group Sing London brought the statue to life with words penned by writer of TV comedy Fresh Meat Tom Basden and voiced by Babylon star Jonny Sweet.

"I'd never heard of Hugh Myddelton before and I am pleased I have now," the actor said of his role.

"I like his humility and the fact that he actually built a river.

"Bringing these people to life is an extraordinary and wonderful thing to do."

The project will run for a year and includes 35 statues in locations across the capital.

Celebrate Ukrainian culture

IN A bid to galvanise the Ukrainian population of the borough, a non-political, non-partisan festival of all things relating to the country will be held this weekend.

The Spirit of Ukraine will take place on Sunday in the grounds of Forty Hall, Forty Hill, Enfield, and feature traditional Ukrainian dancers, singers and musicians.

One of the organisers, Joanna Pasicznyk, said: "There will be arts and crafts, traditional egg painting (Pysanky) and embroidery. The event will also feature performers from our cultural centre in Waltham Cross and our friends from the London Ukrainian Cultural Centre as well as other performers in the London area."

While the situation in eastern Ukraine has dominated the headlines in recent months, Joanna insists that the event will not be political.

The festival will run from noon to 5pm and admission is free.

Films are my tribute to the Greenways

Gran wants more to use pathways

By Hannah Ferry

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

A GRANDMOTHER has been so impressed with accessible pathways through some of the borough's parks that she has single-handedly produced two films in their honour.

Gran-of-ten Maria Tolly, of Percival Road, Enfield, was inspired to create the films when she imagined what it would be like for wheelchair-bound residents who wanted to experience the borough's green spaces, forests and parks but couldn't due to their disability.

When she heard about the Greenways – stretches of wide, even paths that meander through Forty Hall to Clay Hill and up through Hilly Fields – she realised that they could be a fantastic way to gain access to the countryside for everyone.

She has made two films focusing on the route from Forty Hall to the Rose and Crown pub, in Clay Hill, and told the Advertiser: "People who use wheelchairs need to know exactly how accessible a walk is before actually doing it, so that's why I made a film of this particular Greenway route.

"By viewing the films I made you can see how even the surface of the path is, as well as the beauty of the surrounding countryside."

She added: "I really love Enfield and I made the films because I want as many people as possible to see what I see, including those who find it difficult to get around."

However, there are some in the borough who, despite Maria's passion, remain sceptical.

Diki Gleeson, secretary of the Friends of Hillyfields, says that the damage done to nature to install the pathways is not outweighed by their benefits.

She told the Advertiser: "They have semi-ruined a cherished, quiet, natural path through Forty Hall. They are not helping the birds and are disturbing everything."

Nature in focus:
Filmmaker Maria Tolly
loves the Greenways

Dave Cockle, chairman of the Enfield Society, said that while "in principle, the Greenways are great", he admitted that he was worried that because of their "circuitous route" on the section from Cockfosters to The Ridgeway, cyclists, who have been encouraged to use the Greenways, might choose to go along Hadley Road instead.

However, Chris Bond, Enfield Council's cabinet member for environment, is adamant that the routes have vastly improved accessibility for all.

"I hope that Maria's films will inspire even more people to get out there and see for themselves just how beautiful our parks and open spaces can be," he said.

Taste life on two wheels for tenner

By Hannah Ferry

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

ANYONE thinking of hopping on a bike but is put off by the price tag can now test their bicycle legs by forking out just a tenner.

A scheme to let people try before they buy is part of the London Cycling Campaign's strategy to enable anybody who is interested in cycling to hire a bike for a month for ten pounds to see if they like it.

Anyone who lives, works or studies in Enfield and is curious about how the daily commute would be changed by cycling can sign up for the scheme, which sees helmets, bike locks, lights, high visibility vests and child seats all included in the price.

The London Cycling Campaign's latest project allows Enfield residents to rent bicycles for just £10 per month.

After Enfield Council's success in bagging £30million from the Mayor of London to transform the borough into a cycling haven, cabinet member for environment Chris Bond said: "I recommend anyone who's not sure about cycling to give it a try."

"A number of free help and training days are available, so there's no excuse not to try it out."

To sign up to the scheme, budding cyclists simply have to fill out an online application form and a representative from the London Cycling Campaign will get in touch to discuss individual needs and arrange a time and date for the collection of the bike.

One of the residents giving the scheme a go is Garry Kilby, 43, from Winchmore Hill, who admitted he had been impressed by the low cost. "I even have a child seat fitted for my little one at no extra cost," said the new cycling disciple.

Mr Bond is encouraging all residents to "give cycling a go", dubbing Enfield a cycling haven thanks to its "many large, green open spaces and greenways".

Anyone interested in getting involved with the rent-a-bike scheme can log on to www.enfield.gov.uk/cycle_loan_scheme for more information and to download the online application form.

IMPORTANT SAFETY NOTICE

We are a high quality supplier of furniture in the UK.

As part of our commitment to delivering quality products, we regularly test our products to conform with UK fire regulations. One of our products, known as the KISS sofa range, may not conform to UK fire regulations.

Recall Issue

D & O Solutions is recalling a limited number of KISS sofas, sold through their distributor, Stratford Office Furniture, because some sofas may not conform to UK fire regulations. In the event that a KISS sofa is exposed to a naked flame source, there is an increased risk of the sofa catching fire, and it is possible that it will not self-extinguish.

IT MUST BE STRESSED THAT THIS IS ONLY A SMALL NUMBER OF KISS SOFAS MANUFACTURED IN 2012.

Our sofas are tested by FIRA International, who are a UK-approved independent testing laboratory. They test sofa components and issue UK fire safety test certificates. However, recent tests carried out have highlighted that there may be issues concerning compliance with UK test requirements.

Since the tests were carried out, D & O Solutions have taken immediate action to rectify the fault and all of our products are now passing ALL of the tests being carried out, with full FIRA certification.

D & O Solutions KISS sofas, affected by this Recall:

The D & O Solutions KISS sofas, affected by this recall will have a label underneath the sofa. Please check the line 'DATE: '. If it shows any date in 2012, it must be recalled as soon as possible.

What Should You Do If You Have An Affected D & O Solutions KISS Sofa?

If you have one of the affected sofas, please contact D & O Solutions directly, as Stratford Office Furniture are no longer trading. We will either arrange for you to have a new KISS sofa replacement or a full refund, depending on your preference.

Making a joke of quitting smoking

A COMEDY show will feature in the latest anti-smoking campaign from the borough's health bosses.

Stoptober, a nationwide drive to help smokers quit tobacco during October, will this year be using humour to encourage people to kick the habit for a month.

If the financial, social and health benefits of stopping smoking for 30 days are not enough to encourage smokers to take part, Enfield Council will provide an added incentive.

Those who attend two sessions of the council's Stop Smoking Service will be entitled to two free tickets to a special comedy show Laugh Don't Smoke at the Dugdale Centre, in London Road, Enfield.

Cabinet member for public health Rohini Simbodayal said: "I urge everyone who is thinking about stopping smoking to give it a go for Stoptober and seek help because research shows you are four times more likely to quit with this extra support than stopping on your own."

To sign up to Enfield Stop Smoking sessions and to see a full list of available clinics offering the services in Enfield and Haringey, visit www.quitsmoking.uk.com. You can call 0800 652 8402 to be put through to your local stop smoking service.

A barn-storming festival of music

Performers and artists keep crowds happy

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

AN eco-friendly music festival rocked a rural idyll over the weekend.

Livestock saw bands, singers, performers and artists create beautiful music in the barns and fields of Forty Hall Farm, in Forty Hill, Enfield, on Saturday.

One of the organisers of the festival, Leon Wilkin, spoke to the Advertiser after the event.

"It was brilliant," he said. "We put up a comments board and we had about 20 sheets of responses. Everybody raved about it – they said 'you've got to do this again'. Everything on the day was just amazing."

The event proved so popular with music fans that organisers have decided to keep the atmosphere going throughout the year with a fortnightly blues night in one of the barns on the farm.

But Leon took the opportunity to stress that "no sheep were disturbed at all by the event".

Crackdown on dodgy dealers

COUNCIL chiefs are preparing to clamp down on scamming car traders in the borough.

The local authority is set to join forces with the Driver and Vehicle Standards Agency to stop dishonest auto traders in Enfield.

The move by the council aims to protect motorists from buying used vehicles that are of poor quality.

A number of premises have already been issued with prohibition notices ordering them to stop trading because their vehicles are not roadworthy. Speaking to the Advertiser, Enfield Council's cabinet member for environment Chris Bond said: "The council is committed to protecting motorists and wants to raise standards among traders."

"Most traders are responsible, but we are dealing with the small minority who cause unnecessary annoyance to innocent people."

The council has also issued advice and guidance to motorists on what to look out for when buying a used car. The information on offer advises potential car buyers about setting a budget, contacting the seller, inspecting a used car, haggling with sellers and completing the paperwork.

Mr Bond stressed: "It is important that people protect themselves from buying anything faulty or illegal."

"People spend a lot of money on a car and we don't want them to waste their money or feel fooled by anyone."

Teenager wants to be the best busker

A TEENAGER from the borough could be on course to serenade commuters with her busking.

Natalie Shay, 15, of Walker Close, New Southgate, has made it to the final of the Mayor of London's Big Busk competition.

After a series of rounds throughout the summer, the singer-songwriter has reached the final in the youth category.

Natalie will perform in front of a panel of music industry judges on Sunday from noon at Westfield Stratford, in east London.

Winners will be given busking licences allowing them to perform on streets throughout the capital.

Mayor of London Boris Johnson has given his backing to the competition and said of the acts in the final: "Busking is a familiar and much-loved part of city life, particularly in London, and our gigs competition is a fantastic opportunity for talented young musicians to shine in front of the public."

"Over the years it has provided a platform for some great musicians wanting to carve a career in the music industry. We're calling on the public to keep an eye out for our latest line-up of talent, show their appreciation and, most importantly, get voting. We might have a budding Ed Sheeran or Ellie Goulding in our midst."

Performers set to celebrate the lives of black British

Month of events will also look at race issues

By Ruth McKee
ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

WITH only a month to go until the launch of Black History Month, the borough is gearing up for song, performance and comedy.

Enfield songstress Janet Kay will be performing at the Dugdale Centre as part of the event celebrating black history in the British Isles.

However, in a bid to underline the importance of understanding how the history of black Britain intertwines with the modern understanding of race, deeper investigations into racial issues will be on the agenda.

One artist exploring representations of race in the arts will be the Enfield-based dancer and choreographer Loren Whyte who will present his new work which aims to represent the diversity of black British dance, fusing African and contemporary dance styles.

Yasemin Brett, who is the cabinet member for community organisations on Enfield Council, said the month presents people in the borough with “an opportunity to discuss, explore and celebrate the history and contributions of our black communities”.

She added: “Black History Month gives a focus and greater visibility to these issues and their importance, and is an opportunity for everyone to get involved.”

Rohini Simbodyal, cabinet member for culture, sport, youth and public health for Enfield Council, said: “There really is something for everyone in the programme with comedy, speeches, music, dance and theatre. Make sure you check out the events and book early as some of the shows will sell out extremely quickly.”

Star attraction: Janet Kay

Parents are being urged to claim free childcare places

COUNCIL chiefs want to hear from parents of children aged two who might qualify for free childcare for up to 15 hours a week.

The national Free Early Education and Childcare scheme is for families on low incomes, allowing hard-up households to benefit from a free place at a children’s centre or nursery in the borough, enabling parents to look for work or improve their professional skills.

To qualify, parents must earn less than £16,190 and be in receipt of one of a number of state benefits or working tax credits.

Ayfer Orhan, the council’s cabinet member for education, children’s services and protection, said: “We are promoting this scheme widely because we do not want anyone who is eligible to miss out on valuable childcare places.

“There are more than 1,000 places still available at day nurseries, pre-schools, children’s centres and childminders across the borough. Children will derive huge benefits from playing and learning with other children.

“All early years provision is inspected by Ofsted to ensure they maintain high standards. I urge anyone who thinks they are eligible for a free place to contact the council for more information.”

Parents who wish to be considered should apply at www.enfield.gov.uk/terrifictwos

Once they have applied, the council will work with parents to make sure they find a suitable place.

Funding is only provided to childcare providers who are part of Enfield’s Terrific Twos programme.

Festival of friendship

By Ruth McKee
ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

COMMUNAL dance classes, food stalls and climbing walls will all be on offer at a festival this weekend.

The Palmers Green Festival sees events concludes on Sunday when it is open from noon to 7pm with an outdoor bonanza in Broomfield Park.

The festival will feature a Friendship Zone dedicated to older residents and is shaped around getting them involved in community activities to prevent isolation and loneliness.

A number of groups aimed specifically at the over-50s will be taking part, including Age UK, Enfield Voluntary Action, the Enfield Over-50s Forum, the Cypriot Elderly & Disabled Group and the newly-formed Palmers Green and Southgate U3A.

Festival volunteer Vanessa Skarpari said: "The festival is designed to have something for all members of the community. It is great that so many different groups have been working together."

There will be more than 100 stalls selling speciality food such as Polish street food and Caribbean jerk chicken, as well as traditional teas, coffees and cakes and a Pimm's stall.

As well as a climbing wall, mini bungee and a dedicated dance zone, the lakeside bandstand will host choirs, singers and even a belly dancer.

The old bowling green will be transformed into Music on the Green with a line-up of bands and singers presented by musician and music promoter Lester Clayton.

Founder Phillip Chard said that because of the festival's popularity it has been coming back annually.

He added: "The Community Friendship Zone and Music on the Green are positive additions to the festival's aim to unite our community."

Wheel deal: There will be plenty to see at the Palmers Green Festival

Celebrating: Ron and Pam Brett were married on September 11, 1954

Pam and Ron are looking forward to a diamond day

By Hannah Ferry

news.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

A COUPLE have a very special reason to celebrate as they mark 60 years of marriage with their diamond wedding anniversary.

Ron and Pam Brett, of Borrowdale Court, Gordon Hill, will have been married for 60 years on Thursday, September 11.

The couple lived in Edmonton for 28 years and have lived in Enfield for the past 32 years, where they said "everyone is most kind". They moved to Gordon Hill three years ago.

The Bretts first met in 1949 after being pen pals for a year. A friend of Pam's suggested that she write to a friend of her boyfriend's who was doing his national service in Egypt.

They wrote letters to each other while Ron was away and Pam was taking evening secretarial classes in south London.

They met for their first date under the clock at Charing Cross station and spent the evening at Lyons Corner House in Tottenham Court Road, where Pam recalled "the salad bar was half-a-crown".

Ron popped the question in 1951 and the couple were married three years later at Christ Church, in Shooters Hill, south London, when Ron was 25 and Pam was 22.

Their wedding day was not without its fair share of drama.

On the way to the church, the steering on the hired car in which Ron was travelling jammed and, after a rather stressful journey, he ended up arriving at the ceremony in a van.

But the turn of events did not faze his bride to be and Pam, 82, jokingly told the Advertiser: "The commotion with the car on our wedding day didn't turn out to be an omen."

Ron, who is 85, and Pam have two daughters, Chris and Angie, as well as seven grandchildren and four great-grandchildren, the youngest of whom is just four months old.

Pam said: "We're very proud of our little dynasty. We never thought we'd get to having great-grandchildren. They are our joy."

The couple have always shared a number of different pastimes, including walking and reading, and say the secret of their success is that they have "always done everything together".

They have often enjoyed pleasant weekends away at Ron's sister's home in Swanage, in Dorset, where the unpredictable English weather forced them to "have fun in both the rain and the sun".

The happy couple will be having afternoon tea at Capel Manor, in Bullsmoor Lane, Enfield, to celebrate their diamond day with all their family on September 14.

Do it Yourself vs Professional Managing Agents - A false economy?

If landlords decide to adopt the hands on approach they may think that this will save them money, in reality though, unless you have a sound knowledge of the law, strong financial acumen and plenty of time on your hands, the do it yourself approach very often proves to be a false economy. Depending on the age and condition of the property, quality of tenant and the current market conditions DIY landlords can find themselves devoting far more time, energy and emotion on maintaining the property than they ever intended.

Renting your property and managing it yourself sounds easy on paper. Sadly nothing that involves human beings can ever be quite that simple and while letting your property and becoming a landlord can be extremely lucrative if done professionally, all too often ill-informed dabblers can come dangerously unstuck.

What is the worst that could happen? Non-paying tenants? Damages to fixtures and fittings? A large cleaning bill? Agents have some horror stories that will make every landlord's toes curl:

Growing Marijuana- Police discovered a tenant turned a £1m property into a £600,000 secret marijuana farm, running electricity from a street lamp to the house and installing sophisticated sprinkler systems.

One lady tenant established two "massage parlours" with visitors throughout the night. She was eventually evicted after a costly legal battle.

A tenant took 12 months to vacate his property and paid no rent for the entire period. He was an expert in Human Rights legislation.

A professional can man used a property under a false name for a succession of credit card frauds and benefit cheats. He has still not been traced.

One tenant removed everything from inside the property including the carpets and left it in a pile in the garden before departing.

A catering company used an up-market property like a hotel and wrecked it causing almost £10,000 worth of damage

So how can landlords avoid the tenant from hell? You never know if the butter-wouldn't-melt tenant in front of you is harboring secret urges to set fire to the flat or murder their house mate. A good agent, who will vet prospective tenants and protect your interests if things turn sour, is an excellent starting point. Property managers can often act as a professional medium when things go wrong, removing a lot of potential stress, time and confusion, especially as tenants often find it easier and less intimidating to discuss matters with property managers. By having an unemotional "third party", a better level of communication can be achieved between all parties.

Time is money and landlords need to ask themselves honestly if they can really spare the time to manage their property and if they live close enough to do this effectively. You may think going it alone can run smoothly and work well that is until a problem occurs. It is then that the DIY landlord realises just how stressful and time consuming, not to mention expensive things can become.

Hot Leon hits the heights

By Matt Kimberley

It goes without saying that I've been quite excited about this car. There's a spirit of adventure behind owning something that looks this good and has lots of power – and I want to make the most of it.

Seat claims that the Leon Cupra 280 is both more comfortable and potent than the old, rounded-shaped one. That's quite a mountain to climb, so I'm taking it to the Alps to see how it measures up.

A 4am start is only OK when it's in pursuit of great roads in a great car, so I let this one slide and pull into a petrol station for a tank of V-Power Nitro+ super-unleaded – nothing but the finest.

The miles from Bristol to the Channel Tunnel are soothed away in Comfort mode on the drive mode selector. The same is true over in France. A hot hatchback riding on 19-inch wheels has no right to ride this well.

That comfort counts against the 280 in the twisties, however. So, after leaving the toll roads, it's Cupra mode all the way, with the DSG gearbox lever flicked into manual, leaving me to shift with the click-paddles behind the steering wheel.

Sadly, the manual control will shift up for you at the redline, but the gearing is excellent and in third the Cupra flies across the countryside.

Fuel injection management intervenes on every full-bore upshift, delivering a cheeky "bwaarrp" from the twin oval exhaust tips.

It pops its way back down the ratios, too, and the Cupra's four-cylinder turbo engine is soon singing through the foothills of the Alps, dropping to first for tighter hairpins and struggling with physics as it wrenches its way out again as quickly as the front tyres can manage.

Up to second, feel the front wiggle a little and then stabilise.

Snatch third, giggle a little like you're 10 again and then quickly grow up as you push hard on the left pedal, feeling the Cupra's brilliant brakes grab hold of their discs and stress the front rubber to the limit.

The hottest Leon ever made reels in the ribbons of warm asphalt with a vengeance. We just don't have roads like this in the UK – well surfaced, winding and scarcely used.

The endless tricky bends and amazing altitude shifts are working the exceptionally clever VAQ "differential" hard, but you couldn't find a more perfect display of its talents.

It's not a limited-slip differential (LSD), as some people think. It's a set of clutches that control how much traction is re-routed mid-corner from the inside to the outside wheel.

It's a completely variable system as opposed to a mechanical LSD, which is either on or off.

And boy does it work. The harder you power through a corner, you can feel it get more and more involved, taking you way past the traditional point of understeer.

The traction it ultimately delivers through the tortured front tyres is astonishing, but it demands your full attention to drive it quickly.

Lift off with the VAQ system working hard and you'll just understeer into oblivion. Keep your foot in, keep it working and it pulls you around with barely believable lateral G-force.

STAMBOULI IN AS TRIO LEAVE

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

THE transfer window came to a relatively quiet ending at Tottenham Hotspur on Monday, with Benjamin Stambouli arriving at White Hart Lane while three players left the club.

Midfielder Stambouli became Spurs' sixth signing of the summer when he arrived from Montpellier for an undisclosed fee, and the 24-year-old is thrilled to have made the move.

"I'm very happy to be here," he said. "I'm discovering the training centre. It's amazing to be here and I'm determined to show people I can play."

"I know the size of the club and I am happy and proud to join. I will give everything for the club."

However, Stambouli's arrival coincided with the departure of two midfielders as Brazilian Sandro signed for Queens Park Rangers and Lewis Holtby joined Hamburg on a season-long loan deal.

Young defender Zeki Fryers has also left the club after moving to Crystal Palace on a three-year deal.

Stambouli's arrival followed on from last week's signing of defender Federico Fazio, who joined the club from Seville on Wednesday.

The 27-year-old Argentinian has signed a four-year deal after making almost 200 appearances for the Spanish outfit, forming a key part of their side which won the Europa League last season.

"I know Spurs is a historic club in this country and this league," he said. "This is a great club and I'm very happy to be here."

"Yes, I was very young when I went to Seville. Argentina is very different from any country in Europe. It was a big change, but I was very happy in Seville. I learned many things about another style of football, another and another culture.

"Now I'm prepared to change again to another country. England is a very good country and I chose Tottenham, an amazing club. This is the best for me."

"The Premier League is the best in the world. This is a new experience for me. I watch the Premier League on TV and I'm very happy to be here at Tottenham."

Fazio's signing came 24 hours after the departure of the club's longest-serving player, as fellow central defender Michael Dawson moved to Hull City.

The club captain arrived at White Hart Lane in January 2005 and went on to make 324 appearances for Spurs, in addition to winning four caps for England.

"I have been here for almost a decade and have loved every minute of it," he said. "I would like to thank everyone at the club, including the supporters. We have enjoyed some incredible moments together and I hope the club continues to move forward in the future."

Chairman Daniel Levy added: "Michael has been an outstanding club representative both on and off the field throughout the nine-and-a-half years he has served our football club."

"He has always given everything for the Spurs shirt – just one of the reasons he is so deservedly popular throughout the club with team-mates, staff and fans alike."

"His contribution cannot be underestimated. He has been a fantastic individual and personality and a great influence on our younger players, for whom he always found time. We wish him the best of luck in the next chapter of his career."

Moving on: Sandro has left Spurs to join Queens Park Rangers

Defeat in derby leaves Hornsey on the brink of relegation

HORNSEY need to win their final match of the season to have any hope of avoiding relegation from the top flight of the Middlesex County Cricket League after they suffered a 77-run defeat at local rivals North Middlesex on Saturday.

Batting first, the hosts were boosted by a second-wicket stand of 102 between Michael Clements (70) and Adam Holmes (47) which put them in a strong position.

However, their lower order fell away badly in the face of some fine bowling from Martin Tucker (4-57) and Paul Weekes (3-33) – with the last four wickets falling for the addition of just four runs as North Middlesex were dismissed for 181.

Hornsey struggled from the start of their reply as they collapsed to 66-9 before Martin Tucker (32) helped bring a degree of respectability to the innings by dominating a last-wicket stand of 38 with Oliver Yew as they were bowled out for 104. Nick Brand (5-50) and Ethan Bamber (4-9) did most of the damage with the ball.

Meanwhile, Highgate's hopes of securing promotion from Division

Three came to an end with a 90-run defeat at Acton.

Hannadige Soysa shone with the bat for the visitors after they lost the toss, making a superb 131 out of their total of 298-9.

Dan Waddell (56) helped him to add 144 for the third wicket, while Freddie Barrass (6-80) was the pick of the bowlers.

Needing at least a winning draw to stay in the hunt for promotion, Highgate lost wickets at regular intervals at the start of their reply as they slipped to 95-5.

Craig Gourlay (67 not out) and William Russell (48) gave them hope by adding 72 for the sixth wicket, but they were undone by a fine spell from Alex Brennan (4-29) who ripped through the tail as Highgate were dismissed for 208.

There was also defeat for North London as they lost by 42 runs at home to Kenton, being dismissed for 127 after their visitors made 169.

Hornsey host Richmond on Saturday, while North Middlesex visit Ealing, North London go to Ickenham and Highgate entertain MTSSC.

Borough's winning streak is extended

HARINGEY BOROUGH extended their remarkable winning streak in the Essex Senior League to a record-breaking 19 matches as they eased to a 3-0 victory at Waltham Forest on Saturday.

Fresh from their 10-1 rout of Enfield (1893) in their previous outing, the visitors dominated from the start – with Dean Fenton bringing a good early save out of Forest keeper Ferhat Husseyin.

Borough finally got the reward for their dominance on 35 minutes when Walid Matata – who had scored seven times against Enfield (1893) – cut through the home defence and fired into the net from outside the box.

The second goal arrived five minutes before the interval as Adrian Maleknia forced the ball over the line following a goalmouth scramble.

Forest tried to fight back at the start of the second half and Neil Thompson sent over a wicked cross from the left which was headed just wide.

But any doubt over the result was ended when the visitors struck again with 15 minutes left, Dean Fenton finding the corner of the net with a clinical finish.

Borough keeper Ashley Harris saved well from Ibrahim Ezrouki to preserve their clean sheet as they eased to a victory which maintained their 100 per cent record at the start of the campaign.

Haringey Borough, who are second in the early-season league table behind FC Romania on goal difference, are at home to Newham on Saturday (3pm).
